DEATH OF A. J. CASSATT

Heart Disease Closes Noted Magnates Career.

P. R. R. PRESIDENT

Stricken in His Philadelphia Home, Dissolution Comes Before Medical Aid Can be Summoned.

FAMILY AT BEDSIDE WHEN END CAME.

Philadelphia, Dec. 28th.—Alexander Johnson Cassatt, president of the Pennsylvania Railroad company, and one of the foremost railroad men and financiers in the country, died suddenly at his residence in this city Friday. Mr. Cassatt who was a little more than 67 years of age, was stricken with heart disease shortly after 1 o'clock and died before assistance could be given him. He was a victim of an acute heart attack known professionally as "the Stokes Adams syndrome.

Though Mr. Cassatts death was entirely unexpected, he had been in ill health for nearly a year. His condition was aggravated by an attack of whooping cough, which he contr cted from his grandchildren while at Bar Harbor, in September. He never fully recovered from the effects of the attack and when he returned to Philadelphia he remained for several weeks before he resumed his ardorus duties in connection with the management of the railroad and its allied interests.

He was much improved by the rest and early in October he began going regularly to his office, but shortly afterward he was again stricken, having contracted a heavy cold. At that time it was denied that his condition was serious and there was no intimation that he was suffering from any heart affection. During November he was sufficiently recovered from his illness to resume his visits to Broad street station, and he continued attending to important matters until his death. Wednesday he was 67 years of age and, after celebrating the event with his family he never returned to his duties at the railroad offices again. Again it was reported that he was suffering from a slight cold, and was giving attention to only such important business matters as were brought to his attention.

Mr. Cassatt spent much of his time driving and he was out as late as last Monday. Subsequently he was known to have been confined to his bed at his residence at 202 West Rittenhouse Square, but even then his condition was not regarded as alarming.

While not feeling entirely well, Mr. Cassatt arose from his bed Friday morning, but remained in his room. He seemed to be in good spirits and his family was not alarmed about his condition and had no thought of his death. Shortly before 1 o'clock, while sitting in a chair in his apartments, he suffered an acute heart attack and became unconscious. His wife and daughter, Mrs. W. Plunkett Stewart, were with him and his private physician, Dr. K. H. Musser, was summoned, but he was dead when the physician arrived. Dr. Musser said that death had been almost instantaneous.

The news of Mr. Cassatt's death was at once telephoned to Broad Street station, and was flashed through the financial and business sections of the city, causing much astonishment, since the public and even his closest business associates were given to understand that he was not seriously ill.

The announcement of Mr. Cassatt's death caused grief to every official and employe in the Pennsylvania railroad office, with whom he was most popular. The effect of his death upon the local stock market was not as great as might have been expected.

Pennsylvania was quoted at 138 1-4 when the news was received and the stock dropped only 3-4 on the report.

The sudden death of President Cassatt caused a great shock in the executive offices of the Pennsylvania railroad, and for a time business was practically suspended. His condition had not been thought such as to suggest any definite arrangements for the succession of the presidency and the board of directors will not meet to transact official business until after the funeral, for which arrangements have not yet been announced.

Some months ago Mr. Cassatt made changes in the organization of the company, which put new duties on some of the higher officials. Among these was Samuel Rea, the third vice president, and it was suggested at the time that the act was equivalent to placing Mr. Rea in line for promotion, but there is no official authority to sustain such an inference and pending the election of a successor First Vice President Green will assume charge of the affairs of the railroad company.

The operation of the railroad the last year is said to have had much to do with the breaking down of Mr. Cassatt's death. He had just gone to Europe for a rest when the sensational developments in the inter-state commerce commission investigation of rebates brought him home, and he threw himself into the breach in an effort to bring about an amicable settlement of the questions at issue. Deprived of his rest abroad, he plunged into routine work until he went to Bar Harbor, where, in his overworked state, he contracted whooping cough.

A Unique Christmas Tree.

One of the most beautiful and unique Christmas trees the scribe ever saw is at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Undercoffers on Willowbank street.

The back ground is of some black material with a hugh tree decorated with silver and gold tinsel and other glistening articles with bits of cotton fastened on thread making the scene look as though a heavy snow was falling. You can see old Santa Claus in all his glory, the little boys coasting down a steep hill the cows, horses and other animals roaming over the snow covered ground and with the artistic work in the forepart of the room goes to make up a Christmas decoration which cost a great deal of money and lots of hard work. Mr. and Mrs. Undercoffer were about four weeks getting this up and deserve much credit for their beautiful work. It is always a pleasure to have their friends come and take a look and we assure any one it is certainly worth their time to walk out to this home and see this unique tree.

Pleasant View Union Chapel.

The people of Bellefonte who have taken an interest in this little house of worship will feel proud to hear that the good people who have the institution in charge have been wonderfully successful the past year.

On Wednesday evening the scholars gave a delightful Christmas entertainment, having been instructed in their recitations and songs by Misses Sarah Fitzgerald, Rebbie Noll and Lillian Walker.

The school was made happy by a Christmas present of $10.00 given by M. C. F. York of Warriorsmark, which increased the balance in the treasurey at the close of the year to $56 37. The school is very grateful to the general public for their unfailing and helpful assistance during the past, and hope the same interest will be taken in them in the future.

After the ceremony a wedding dinner was served at the home of the groom. The groom is the oldest son of Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Musser, and is employed at the Altoona car shops, and his bride is an estimable young lady and has the best wishes of her many friends for a happy future. Mr. and Mrs. Musser left the next day for Altoona where they will make their future home.

Mr. O'Shell is many years his senior and had been in the employ of the company for a number of years. We wish them success.

FIFTY-THREE ARE DEAD

Terra Cotta Wreck Grows in Magnitude as Hours Pass.

MANY ARE INJURED

Pitiful Scenes Enacted at Morg Will Live Long in Eye Witnesses Memory.

BURIALS OF VICTIMS TUESDAY

Washington, Jan. 1.—The Baltimore & Ohio railroad wreck at Terra Cotta Sunday night grows in magnitude as the hours pass. The most conservative estimate of the dead is fifty-three, with three scores of injured in the hospitals or at their homes suffering from wounds and fractures sustained in the rear-end collision which completely demolished the two day coaches and the smoker attached to the local Frederick, Md., express No. 66. Several of the most seriously injured were expected to die during the night and the death list may yet reach sixty or more.

Heart rending and pitiful were the scenes at the city morgue, where hundreds of persons have flocked to assist the police in the identification of the dead. Women, girls, and even men with iron nerves, shrieked, sobbed and fainted as their relatives or friends were found among the thirty-two corpses strewn about the floor. Coffins, wicker baskets and winding sheets were found on all sides. It was a day never to be forgotten.

Officials of the Baltimore & Ohio are conducting an investigation of the wreck in Baltimore for the purpose of placing the responsibility for the terrible disaster.

Found Body of his Brother Along the Railroad.

William Felmlee, a resident of Howard, Centre county, met instant death on the P. and E. railroad, just below the tower at Hyner Saturday evening at 7.30 o'clock.

The unfortunate man was walking up the tracks towards Hyner to visit the family of his brother. Trackwalker Felmlee, and it is thought he was struck by extra freight train east-bound, which was being hauled by a light engine running at good speed. In the darkness it is likely the lone traveler became confused or failed to see the approaching train in time to escape. He was hurled to the side of the tracks, where his bruised and crushed body found about fifteen minutes later by his own brother as he walked down the track in the performance of his duty. His feelings can well be imagined when he discovered the dead man to be his own brother.

The trackwalker had the body conveyed to his home, and a Renovo undertaker was summoned, who prepared the same for burial. Deceased was unmarried.

Coroner Armstrong was notified of the accident by the railroad officials, but when he learned the facts in the case, he deemed it unnecessary to go to the scene to hold an inquest.

Married in the Church.

On Monday evening Mr. John M. Shope of State College and Miss Carrie B. Lutz of Zion, thought they would surprise their many friends by being quietly married at the Methodist parsonage at this place. But when they reached the parsons home they found he had gone to prayer meeting and as no other minister would do they went to the church to find him. As it was Watch meeting night this good man was very busily engaged, but he laid aside his sermon and other official work and united these two young persons in holy bonds of wedlock. It was quite a suprise to the young folks but no doubt they are just as happy today as if they had of been married at the parsonage.

Mr. Shope is a mail carrier at State College and is an industrious ambitious young man. Miss Lutz is a daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Hiram Lutz of Zion and is well fitted to make a splendid helpmate on this great journey through life. MRS. JOHN ROWE PASSED AWAY.

Died in German Hospital at Philadelphia.

The sad news was received in Bellefonte Tuesday that Mrs. John C. Rowe wife of the County Recorder died in the German Hospital from cancer of the stomach.

Two years ago it was first noticed that Mrs. Rowe was suffering from this disease and received treatment at that time in Philadelphia and was thought to be getting better, but it was only temporary.

Two weeks ago she was again taken to the city for an operation, and everything known to medical skill was done to help her, but death claimed her.

Mrs. Rowe was a lady of unfailing christian love and devotion for her family. She was a great home lover—loved to entertain her friends at her home and not witnstanding the burdens of helping, cheering and comforting those she loved she was devoted and faithful to her church. How she will be missed, in the home, none can tell except those who have gone through trials such as this one. Our hearts ache for them and we extend our sympathy in this sad hour of bereavement.

Mrs. Rowe's maiden name was Martha Bond. She was born in Butler, Pa., and was 44 years old.

She was a member of St. John's Catholic church of Bellefonte, and when in health was always found in her respective place during the hours of worship.

She was the relict of Joseph Gramley, who preceeded her to the grave some twenty-five years ago. Her maiden name was Smeltzer and she was aged 92 years and 6 months. She was born in Miles township. Mrs Gramley was a remarable woman in many respects. She was the mother of sixteen children, fifty-seven grandchildren, seventy great-grand children and five great-great grandchildren. Heredity Triumphant.

By Alice Lovett Carson.

A shrill whistle echoed along the sunny avenue. Mary Dexter jumped from her seat on the porch, scattering embroidery silks in all directions. She waved her handkerchief in response. Then she ran into the house calling; "Aunt Linda! Where are you? Here's Dave Green to see you!"

Without waiting for a reply she returned to the porch just in time to greet the young man who came up the steps. "Glad to see me, Mary?" he asked as with a hasty glance around she put up her face for a kiss. Then the two sat down on the top step in earnest, subdued conversation. Mary Dexter was a maid of nineteen with a fresh peachblow complexion. Today, wearing a simple white frock, she looked her best—and knew it.

In a few minutes an elderly woman came out the front door. Her hair, worn as a coronet, was silvery white, though she was only forty. Age had touched her face lightly, pressing in the wrinkles with loving fingers that left only sweetness in the expression. Rumor told a romantic tale of Linda Pennington's life, and for once rumor was right. A girlish engagement with a young army officer who fell in his first battle, a few years as a nurse in the war, interrupted by a marriage with Lyall Pennington, early widowhood and a subsequent life devoted to good work—these were among the incidents in her story. For many years all her plans had been for Mary, whom she had adopted long ago.

Mrs. Pennington had taken a great interest in Mary because she came from her own town, and the case of the child was particularly pitiful, for there were no near relatives to whom she could be sent.

Fresh from the sadness caused by the death of her husband, Linda found the child's companionship a great comfort. Mary had passed serenely through the stages of childhood and youth and now, at nineteen, under the training of private tutors, was prepared to enter Merton college in the fall. After graduation endless possibilities opened before her. This was the situation that July morning when Mrs. Pennington came out on the porch and greeted young David Green, one of Mary's admirers.

He was a manly fellow of twenty-one, son of a prosperous farmer of the rural district. He had lately been given a good sized tract of land by his father, with the instruction to "see what he could do with it," and he was doing well.

"You've just come back from New York, haven't you, David? asked Mrs. Pennington.

"Yes," said Mary. "He's been away two whole days."

The sigh with which this was said brought a laugh from the other two. Mrs. Pennington seated herself in the rocker.

"Why, Mary," she said, "is this your embroidery on the floor? Pick it up before it gets dirty."

The girl leaned back comfortably against the railing. "You pick it up, Dave," she said indifferently. And the young man did so. But Linda bit her lip in vexation. It was a little thing, but characteristic of the way Mary made her friends wait on her.

"Did you go away on business, David?" she asked hastily.

"No—yes—well, I don't know as you'd call it exactly business."

"I should," said Mary decidedly—"the most important business for you just now, Dave." The lad laughed, embarrassed.

"Dear me, this sounds very mysterious" said Mrs. Pennington, smiling, "what is it all about?

"I went to get something for Mary," said David,

"And here it is," said the girl, holding out her left hand. "Isn't is a beauty. Aunt Linda?" A handsome solitaire flashed into view."

The significance of the stone did not enter Linda Pennington's mind, for it was many years since she had thought of such things. "Mary, you know you may not receive presents of jewelry from young men," she was beginning but the words died on her lips. Mary and David looked for some sign of approval, read in her face grief, disappointment and refusal.

"Aren't you pleased?" went on the girl. "We've been engaged since Christmas. Before I visited Florrie Tucker, Dave asked me and I said, 'Id' see.' Then while I was away he kept writing to me—and I always did like him best of any of the boys—so I just had to say 'yes.' He's so obstinate, Dave is, he wouldn't take 'no.'"

"Of course I am very much surprised," Linda said when she could trust herself to speak. "I think you are both to young to talk of such things. Besides, you are going to college soon, Mary, and I do not approve of indefinite engagements."

"But there's nothing indefinite about our engagement," replied the girl airily, twisting the ring on her finger. "We are to be married in September."

"What?"

"Oh, yes, it's all settled," nodding her head. "I wrote this morning to Merton canceling my application. I'm tired of study—what is the use of it? I know more now than any other girl—or boy almost—in Doresttown. Just think, after September I'll never have to study any more!"

Mrs. Pennington rose in wrath from her chair. "Mary," she cried sharply, "you don't know what you're saying! You are giving up carelessly what I would give years of my life to have had when I was a girl—what you will always regret giving up. I don't often exercise my authority as your guardian, but when you act like a silly child I must. I ask you—no, I order you—to break this engagement!"

Mary sprang up and stamped her foot angrily. "Well, I won't" she cried. "And you can't make me; I'm nineteen years old."

Linda sank back in the chair with trembling lips. The mother who had eloped was speaking through her daughter "Mary, if you love me," she pleaded, but she knew it would be no use. The girl's heredity was showing, and she must bow to the inevitable.

Mary never would understand what a blow this was to her guardian's ambitions for her. College, then advanced work, or, if the girl preferred, art study in Paris or music in Germany—these the plans she had made. And this mad whim must overturn them all!

The girl's storm of fury spent itself in floods of tears. "Aunt Linda, I can't. Don't ask me to." she sobbed.

David drew his sweetheart toward him. He had been a silent, troubled witness of the scene. Now he spoke quietly.

"It's like this, Mrs. Pennington, we love each other, and we don't see the use of waiting. If we wait four years by then we'll have grown apart perhaps, and it will be harder to give in to each other. We want to be married at once. I am making a good living; my people are pleased, and we only want your consent."

But she shook her head impatiently. "I have nothing against you, David, but it is impossible."

"Oh, no, Mrs. Pennington!" he cried. "Think—think—when you were young and in love. Don't you remember how it was then?"

How old memories can rise again! A vision of a boyish soldier, with pleading eyes and tender smile. And that parting could she ever forget the sound of his voice, low and thrilling?

She gave a shuddering sigh and open tear dimmed eyes. "I was only seventeen and he was twenty and I never saw him again. His body could not be found. "Ah!" steadying her voice, she went on. "You are right, David. It was foolish and wrong to try to control Mary's life. She must work it out for herself. My plans were far different from this, but I can give them up, as I have given up others."

"Dear Mrs. Pennington," said David, grasping her hand.

Then, when Mary ran off to set the supper table and David followed, with awkward attempts to help, Linda Pennington drew forth an old locket and gazed long at the portrait within. "Once I thought that the shattering of my dreams would kill me," she murmured. "But I lived to thank God for other dreams and duties that came. So it will be now, I think."

"Supper is ready, Aunt Linda!" called Mary, and Mrs. Pennington turned from the sunset glow.

Nellie.

Mrs. Dayton entered her husband's study and sank into a chair.

"You look hot, Eleanor," said Doctor Dayton, glancing up from a scientific journal. "Have you been out in the sun?"

"Yes, I walked over to the fresh-air camp to see the children who were brought from the city this morning."

"I wish you wouldn't go there so often, Eleanor," he said, a little impatiently. "A visit to the fresh-air camp seem to exhaust you more than anything else."

"But Harry, I love to see the children. One such darling little girl came this morning. She has yellow curls and big brown eyes, and her name is Nellie. I used to be called Nellie when I was her age. She's from the foundlings' home, and I couldn't help wishing, Harry, that we—"

"Now, dear, don't bring up that subject again. You know I doubt the wisdom of adopting children, and you are not strong enough to assume the care of a youngster." The doctor smiled tenderly at Mrs. Dayton. "Haven't you trouble enough looking after me without flying to ills you know not of?" As he ceased speaking the telephone bell rang.

"I'm wanted at the camp," he explained, banging up the receiver and reaching for his medicine-case. "A child lifted the top off a beehive and has been badly stung."

An hour later Mrs. Dayton rose from her porch hammock at the sound of her husband's voice. "Here's a little visitor, Eleanor!" he called.

She ran out to the motor-car and took in her arms a limp little baby girl. "Why, it's Nellie!" she said.

"Is it Nellie? I wasn't thinking about anything but her stings, which were pretty severe. Talk about grateful patients, Eleanore! When I managed to relieve the little thing's sufferings she clung to me, and I simply couldn't get away from her. So I told the matron we'd keep her overnight. You see her arms are badly swollen, and she may need more care than they'd have time to give her at the camp."

"I like the doctor man," lisped Nellie. "I want to stay wif him."

Mrs. Dayton kissed the yellow curls and laid the child in the hammock, and the doctor disappeared into the house, murmuring something about preparing a soothing lotion.

One morning two weeks later the matron of the fresh-air camp telephoned Doctor Dayton that the children with whom Nellie had come were to be returned to the city that day. She requested him to bring Nellie to the camp in time for the afternoon train.

"Today! Why, is the time up already? Why—well, you see, I think my wife wished to keep her—that is, I—hang it all—I beg your pardon, I mean that we both want her."

He turned from the telephone and saw Mrs. Dayton listening in the doorway. Her eyes were bright and her cheeks wore an unwonted glow of health. She was a winsome picture with Nellie hanging to her skirts and the chain of flowers in her hands that she was weaving for the baby's curls.

"O Harry!" was all she said, but the look of love and gratitude in her eyes filled his own with happy tears.

A Christmas Debauch Ends in Suffocation.

After celebrating Christmas with some friends John L. Purcell, an iron moulder in F. E. Trumps foundry, was seen to enter his house in Jersey Shore last evening at 6 o'clock in an intoxicated condition. A half hour later smoke was seen issuing from the upper portion of the house. An alarm was sounded and the fire department responded and extinguished the blaze before much damage resulted.

After the fire companies left the scene it was observed that Purcell was not among the spectators. An investigation was then made by the chief of police and chief of the fire department, and on going into the front room up stairs were horrified to find Purcell on his knees with his head resting against the wall cold in death. It is thought that he had gone to bed with a lighted cigar in his mouth, and in this manner the bed clothing was set on fire. Being suddenly awakened he evidently became confused and in attempting to find a window was smothered to death.

The unfortunate man about 43 years was of age and was married. His wife at the time was in Milton spending Christmas with her parents and was summoned by telephone.

Markey-Fraser.

Christmas morning at the First Methodist Episcopal church at Altoona, the pastor, Rev Horace Lincoln Jacobs, united in marriage John Samuel Markey, of Frankstown township, and Mrs. Tamey Fraser of Hollidaysburg.

The "Spirit of Christmas."

The spirit of Christmas produced no surprises anywhere that was more beautiful or more gratefully received than the event that took place at the Academy on Christmas eve. It is well known how Rev. James P. Hughes the revered emeritus Principal of the Academy, has endeared himself to the hundreds of students whom he has faithfully zealously and successfully instructed and counseled during his long career as a teacher. And so it is not a matter of wonder that many of these students who attended the Academy when Mr. Hughes was in the full power of his strength as an instructor and counsellor should turn their minds and hearts toward their old teacher at this Christmastide which calls forth all that is noblest in the human heart.

Possessed of this spirit of gratitude and appreciation almost divine, a large number of his old pupils made up their minds that Mr. Hughes at this Christmas season of 1906 should realize beyond a doubt the good will they bear to him, and so presented on Monday evening through a committe of which Miss Anna Hoy was the spokesman a very handsome brass bed with all the incidentals necessary to make it absolutely comfortable and in addition fifty dollars in gold to be used in the purchase of good books which are his delight these days or to be applied in any way that will bring him the greatest and most enduring happiness.

Mr. Hughes was perfectly overwhelmed with the surprise and yet showed himself equal to the emergency and made a speech that was teeming with beautiful sentiments of gratitude and compliment. He referred to the busiest days in the school room as the happiest of his life and said it was the faithfulness, enthusiasm and goodness of his pupils coupled with the sweet influences of their lives that have brought so much credit to the school, their homes, the town and themselves, that he has been able to pass through lifes struggle so successfully and attain to his present age of four score years. He also attributed the continued success of the Academy to their influence while in school and since.

Mr. Hughes expresses his heartfelt thanks to every doner represented in this magnificent gift, assuring them that the "bed of roses" which they so kindly wished for him in his last days would be realized, not only in the comfort and pleasure he expects to enjoy through the double gift, but in the fresh inspiration his life receives from this beautiful expression of esteem and gratitude on their part.

He further wishes for all his students the Merriest Christmas-tide, and the happiest New Year filled with the sweetest spiritual and temporal blessings.

Family Numbers 21.

William H. Albright, of Morgan Run, Boggs township, not far from Philipsburg, rejoices in the arrival of his nineteenth child, born last week. The family consists of a dozen fine, handsome boys and seven girls—all of them pretty. Several of the sons and daughters are married, and the latest arrival has a number of nephews and nieces.

Mr. Albright is still on the sunny side of 55, and his wife carries her years remarkably well. They are very proud of their family and would not change places with Rockefellers or Vanderbilts.

OPEN PUBLICITY THE BEST GUARANTY OF MERIT.

When the maker of a medicine, sold through druggists for family use, takes his patients fully into his confidence by frankly and fearlessly publishing broadcast as well as on its bottle wrappers, a full list of all its ingredients in plain English, this action on his part is the best possible evidence that he is not afraid to have the search light of investigation turned full upon his formula and that it will bear the fullest scrutiny and the most thorough investigation. Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription for the cure of the weaknesses, periodical pains and functional derangements of the organs distinctly feminine, is the only medicine put up for sale through druggists for woman's special use, the maker of which is not afraid to take his patients into his full confidence by such open and honest publicity.

A glance at the published ingredients on each bottle wrapper, will show that it is made wholly from native, American, medicinal roots, that it contains no poisonous or habit-forming drugs, no narcotics and no alcohol—pure, triple-refined glycerine, of proper strength being used instead of the commonly employed alcohol, both for extracting and preserving the active medicinal properties found in the roots of the American forest plants employed. It is the only medicine for women's pecular diseases, sold by druggists, that does not contain a large percentage of alcohol, which is in the long run so harmful to woman's delicate, nervous system. Now, glycerine is perfectly harmless, and serves a valuable purpose by possessing intrinsic value all its own, and besides it enhances the curative effect of the other ingredients entering into the "Favorite Prescription."

Some of the ablest medical writers and teachers endorse these views and praise all the several ingredients of which "Favorite Prescription" is composed—recommending them for the cure of the very same diseases for which this world-famed medicine is advised. No other medicine for women has any such professional endorsement—worth more than any number of ordinary testimonials. If interested, send name and address to Dr. R. V. Pierce, Buffalo, N. Y., for his little book of extracts from the works of eminent medical writers and teachers, endorsing the several ingredients and telling just what Dr. Pierce's medicines are made of. It's free for the asking.

Suggest Tax Levy of $1 a Year on Hunters

Backed by the Pennsylvania State Sportsmen association, the state game commission has begun an active campaign for the passage by the next legislature of a bill levying a tax of $1 a year on every resident hunter in Pennsylvania.

It is proposed that 85 per cent. of the money raised by this tax shall be paid to the state game commissioner to be used for the payment of the salaries of its officers of the game laws, and to defend officers charged with offenses in the enforcement of such laws.

"The proposed bill will provide," said Dr. Joseph Kalbfus, secretary of the game commission and a member of the legislative committee of the State Sportsmen association," that no person under 14 years of age shall be permitted to carry a gun, either in the fields, in the forests or on the waters of Pennsylvania.

"It will also provide that all persons between the years of 14 and 21 may hunt upon property owned or controlled by themselves, or by the parent or parents of such person, and that all other persons born in the United States, and residents of this state, shall pay a fee of $1 for the privileges of hunting for what is classed as game within the limits of this commonwealth, and that all persons between the years of 14 and 21 shall secure a license before hunting on lands not owned or controlled either by themselves or by the parent or parents of said person.

"It will not attempt in any way to prevent any one from using a gun in defense of person or property," added Dr. Kalbfus. "These men argue that the great majority of men who hunt are perfectly willing and anxious to pay this amount; that the elimination of the small boy with the gun will save the lives of unnumbered birds other than game birds and animals, and will prevent much wrong that is constantly being done at the hands of this class of hunters."

"One man in thirty in Pennsylvania is a hunter, and, while every man, woman and child is benefitted by the lifeword of birds, but one out of thirty is benefitted by the hunting of game. There is no reason why twenty-nine men should be compelled to contribute toward the maintenance of game for the pleasure or benefit of one man, especially when that one is willing and ready to foot the entire bill himself."

Serious Results of a Small Cut.

It was so trivial that she paid no attention to it. A couple of weeks ago a little lump appeared under her arm. It grew worse and finally it was lanced a couple of times but it gave her little relief Saturday the physicians lanced her side and took from it about one quart of pus, this morning she is resting easier and it is thought she will speedily recover.

Will Fight the Law.

It is said that the Pennsylvania railroad will allow the legislature to pass an act providing that railroads shall not charge more than two cents a mile for passenger traffic, but that the company will take the matter into the courts on the claim that its character permits it to charge three cents a mile. The company says that because its charter is older than the state contion no law can be passed abridging the privileges granted it by it its charter.

Thus the great Pennsylvania railroad standing upon a charter obtained in a period of the state's history when corporations received that they asked for with no questions asked, will employ all the legal talent at its command to defeat the will of the people in regard to lower passenger rates on the railroads of the state. This giant corporation, which has no respect for the law, will invoke the power vested in it by a charter which is now moss grown to prevent the state legislature from compelling it to be just to the people.

The Pennsylvania railroad has been guilty of crimes in the past quarter of a century of such magnitude as to warrant the state in annulling its charter and making the company amenable to the provisions of the constitution. The legislature is pledged to give the people a law providing that no railroad shall be allowed to charge more than two cents a mile for passenger traffic, and such a law should be passed, despite the threat of the Pennsylvania railroad to upset it by an appeal to the courts.

The Electric Air Line.

In speaking of the 22,000 miles of railroad now under contract for construction or in immediate prospect in the United States, the Review of Reviews in a recent issue says:

One new project looms up in trunkline territory. It is an electric railway, projected by no less a personage than Joseph Ramsey, Jr., late president of the Wabash Railroad. It is announced under the name "New York, Pittsburg & Chicago Air Line." It is to be, say the announcements, a double track, high-speed electric passenger and freight railway. Mr. Ramsey announces further that he has practically completed the financing of the project. On the face of it the road looks like the dream of an enthusiastic electric engineer,—but Joseph Ramsey, Jr., is no dreamer. On the contrary, he is, in the judgement of many, the most able constructive railway man in the east.

License Court.

A decree of the court was filed on Tuesday changing the time for holding of the license court for the year 1908, from the first Tuesday in March, 1908, to the Monday of the second week of the December term of court, 1907. There will be no change in the time the license becomes effective, which will be from April first to April of each year. The purpose of holding license court in December is to give any hotel man who may either be granted a new license or refused an old one, or in case of transfers, to have ample time to make all necessary arrangements. For the year 1907 license court will be held as usual, the first Tuesday in March.

A Ticklish Question For Uncle Sam Is the "Venerable Honorable" Japanese Problem

How the Segregation of Young Nipponese In San Francisco's Schools Has Punctured the Dignity of the Mikado's Sons—Why California Objects to the Japanese and Kicks Against Educating a Large Alien Population

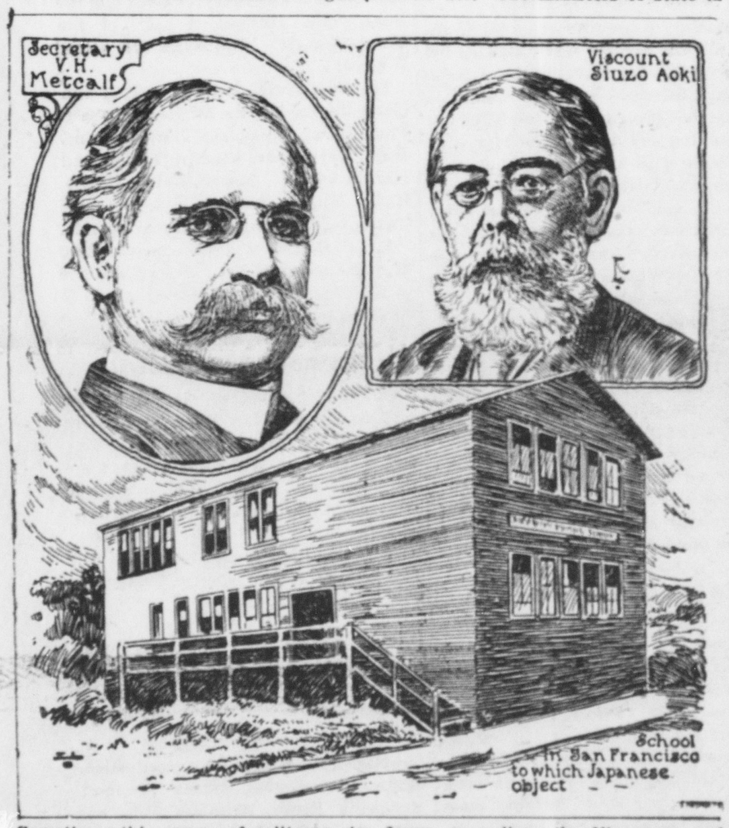
By ROBERTUS LOVE.

WHAT shall we do with the Japs? What will the Japs do to us—or try to do—unless we do justice to them according to their own interpretation of justice? No problem more delicately ticklish has arisen for Uncle Sam's solution in these many years. It is a serious problem, by no means to be treated flippantly.

The affair of the Japanese and the San Francisco public schools is merely a manifestation of the extraordinary ticklishness of the whole proposition. The Japanese are a people peculiarly sensitive. In this they are in direct contrast to the Chinese, to whom they are related in some degree by blood inherited from an ancient past. Your heathen Chinese shrinks only from a blow, caring little for a passive insult, but your Japanese gentleman possesses a sense of dignity which through long centuries has been cultivated to a cult, and if you look slantwise at him it is as bad as stepping on his toes.

Excessively Polite.

The Japanese sense of dignity is perhaps his strongest racial characteristic. It accounts for his extreme politeness, a politeness which the Caucasian sometimes considers obsequiousness. But from the Japanese viewpoint there is nothing cringing in his bowing and scraping and kotowing and his employment of superlative terms of veneration. These things are a part of his education, of the education of his ancestors from immemorial ages.



Sometimes this excess of politeness is amusing, but it is always respectable.

The good gray poet of the Sierras, Joaquin Miller, at his home on the heights near San Francisco once told the present writer a little story in point. The poet keeps two or three Japanese young men about his place. Until her death a year ago his aged mother, ninety years old, lived with him. One day Mr. Miller and his mother had occasion to ride down the hills to the town. A young Japanese hitched the horse to the buggy. He was to act as driver. The buggy was a small one, and when the three were seated the Japanese observed that the poet's legs, which are handsomely long, were hanging outside the buggy bed.

"The boy was greatly distressed," said Mr. Miller. "He had done his polite best to dispose us comfortably in the buggy. Seeing my legs thus, he bowed profoundly and said, 'Ah, venerable honorable sir, what shall we do with your venerable honorable legs?'"

It is necessary to know the Japanese sensitiveness, which induces this "venerable honorable" politeness, in order to understand why the Japanese government is so highly offended because of the segregation of Japanese school children in San Francisco. These children have not been excluded from the schools. They have been placed in a public school built and maintained for children of Mongolian and Korean descent. This school has all the facilities of the schools for white children, with teachers equally competent. It was established some years ago by a municipal ordinance, but until the earthquake and fire altered conditions many of the Japanese children overflowed into the other public schools. The law was not enforced then. The recent decision of the school board to enforce the segregation law is the occasion of the present difficulty.

San Franciscans present many reasons why Japanese and Chinese children should not be permitted to attend the schools where the white children are educated. These reasons apply more particularly to the Japanese than to the Chinese, because there are so many Japanese youths nearly full grown who want to go to school. Parents object to having their little girls and boys of tender years sit alongside big fellows from Nippon, in many instances believed to be more than eighteen years old. It is quite probable that they would object to white youths of the corresponding maturity for obvious reasons. What the young Japanese chiefly want to learn is English, and most of them must begin in the primary grades.

Their Dignity Punctured.

When the order of segregation in conformance with the local law was announced the Japanese seemed to take it as a studied affront. Their sense of dignity was lacerated. In other words, they were stung. They felt that it was a discrimination that punctured their dignity. They arose in protest to the powers at Washington, appealing their protest through Ambassador Aoki up to the mikado's government, the court of last resort with every son of Japan.

There are those who point out as justification for San Francisco's action the fact that in our own country a large class of our own citizens, the negroes, is segregated as to public school instruction in many states. They urge this as a reason why Japan should come down from her high horse and be reasonable. But that is throwing fuel on the fire. The ministers of state in Japan as well as the Nipponese residents in America know very well that our negro citizens are educated in separate schools in certain states because of the strong race prejudice. The Japanese themselves in America come to absorb more or less of this race prejudice in relation to the negro, and even where they take the broader view of the solidarity of the human race they resent anything that tends to class them with the negroes, because they know that the negro is looked down upon in certain sections, and they do not care to be looked down upon themselves. They won't stand that.

While San Francisco seems to have good reason for segregating the Caucasian and the oriental in its public schools because of the radical difference required in the methods of teaching an English speaking child of seven years and a non-English speaking youth of eighteen, there is no denying that race prejudice enters unofficially into the problem. There is a race problem on the Pacific coast which for the present touches no other section of the Union. Formerly it had to do with the Chinese, and it was not until the problem reached and touched practically every part of the country in some measure that the Chinese exclusion act was passed through congress. The memorable Dennis Kearney agitation against the Chinese in San Francisco twenty years ago was the forerunner of Chinese exclusion. Does the present imbroglio portend Japanese exclusion? That is the question which people throughout the United States are asking.

A Ticklish Problem.

Congressman Everis A. Hayes of California already has a Japanese exclusion act before congress, and the other day he was on the point of introducing a joint resolution requesting the president to bring about a new treaty with Japan which would leave the United States free to handle the Japanese immigration question as this country might deem proper. Only President Roosevelt's earnest protest that such a measure would be ill timed prevented Mr. Hayes from taking this action. The president seems to be striving to avoid poking the coals. He is aware that the venerable honorable Japanese problem is ticklish, and he sees the necessity of politeness. Accordingly for the present he seems to have sheathed the big stick and resumed the presidential smile. The average citizen, irrespective of party, no doubt will assent to this course as the way of wisdom. We are not looking for trouble with Japan. This is not a party question. It concerns all the people. Peace with honor, peace with politeness—that is the thing.

The race question as to the Japanese in California and elsewhere on the Pacific coast is sectional just now, but it may become general. San Francisco does not object to the Japanese in a racial sense on the same ground as the south objects to the negro. The objection is based, strange to say, largely upon the aptitude of the Japanese for acquiring American business efficiency and for taking the place of the white man as a workman. The Japas everybody in California calls him—is apt. He picks up information with surprising celerity and adapts it to his uses with amazing ease. He is not an intellectual inferior. There is not so very much objection to his intermarriage with the whites—none at all in many instances. In this respect he is not to be considered along with the Chinese. The Jap is of a higher order.

Union Labor Aroused.

California has discovered that the Japanese are taking away the white man's business and the white man's job. Union labor, which is particularly strong in San Francisco, is up in arms against the Nipponese for that reason. There is a state labor organization in opposition to Japanese encroachments. When they find it desirable these imported people can work very much more cheaply than white men can work, because they can live more cheaply. The same condition obtains in business. They can make money where white men would find a hard struggle. With the Japanese competition in business many white men go to the wall.

There is a man in Japan named Nishomura, who controls the cobbler trade in San Francisco. He operates a regular monopoly in shoe mending. His monopoly extends to other important towns in California. He has a system, operated by his agents in that state, which has made it almost imperative for you to get your shoes soled by a Jap. He is rich and lives in his flowery Japan.

One Uchigama of San Francisco monopolizes the potato growing business in the rich Sacramento valley. He is a millionaire. He corners the San Francisco spud market when he likes. He employs Jap labor altogether on his vast potato plantations.

One Nagasama of San Francisco owns and operates one of the largest vineyards in California. He used to be a domestic servant, a "housemaid." He is worth millions. His wines are drank in New York, Liverpool, London, in each of which cities he maintains branch establishments.

Not Americans, but Subjects of Japan.

There is growing up in California a line of Japanese communities in the midst of white communities. The Japs have their own banks, their own shops, their own clubs. They are not citizens of the United States, but subjects of Japan. They come over, in fact, to acquire occidental culture and occidental cash, returning to apply these two convenient commodities to the glory of Nippon and to their own personal advancement in the land of flowers. Each Jap who takes American education and American money to his native island adds to the intellectual and material strength of his empire.

He adds also to its fighting strength.

Therein lies food for thought. Fifty years ago the United States opened Japan to modern civilization. We crowed about it for nearly fifty years. We sent our emissaries to the island empire, teaching them about the white man's God. Yet the Shinto shrine and the Buddhist temple flourish in San Francisco, and in the great temple at Tokyo the 14,000 gods of ancient Nippon still grin with sardonic grimness, and the greatest of these is the war god.

The Japanese can fight. Did they not whip the Chinese in 1894 and the Russians in 1904? Only the other day they launched the most powerful battleship afloat and from a native shipyard too. They learned how to build it from us and from Europeans. In America and Europe they are learning, learning, day by day and year by year. Shall San Francisco at its own expense educate a large alien population so that this population may return to Japan and use the education thus acquired in strengthening the mikado's empire to the end that the empire may fight more vigorously and more intelligently against us in the event of war when the ultimate mastership of the Pacific shall be determined? This is what California is asking, and the question has percolated to the Atlantic coast.

The president sent his secretary of commerce and labor, Mr. Metcalf, to San Francisco to study the situation. Mr. Metcalf lives in a San Francisco suburb. His report should be interesting.

In any event the problem is a big one and constantly growing bigger. Wisdom suggests that it should be handled without the hysteria of prejudice, but on broad grounds of international diplomacy. Let us be firm; let us look to our interests; let us stand for our rights and let us be polite.

LEGEND OF THE GARTER.

Contradictory Versions of the Foundation of the Order.

I knew, as every schoolboy knows, the legend that a certain Countess of Salisbury dropped her garter at a ball and that the king, picking it up amid the smiles of courtiers, handed it to her with the happy and now immortal phrase, "Honi soit qui mal y pense." But this legend, I recalled, had had to go the way of the story of King Alfred and the cakes, the story of William Tell and the apple and many another pretty fairy tale of history. At last I went to Sir Nicholas Harris Nicolas' "History of the Orders of Knighthood," where I found a delightful mass of contradictory authority produced.

The tale of the ensign and name of the order were first told by Polydore Vergil (1470-1555), who wrote in the time of Henry VII. and Henry VIII. and who said that the lady was "the queen or the king's mistress." Segar, whose work, "Honor, Military and Civil," appeared in 1602, 250 years after the order was founded, was the first to say that it was the Countess of Salisbury. Other writers say that it was the Countess of Kent. John Anstis (1669-1744), garter king of arms, who published several heraldic works, ridicules the whole story. He confesses that an author of Henry VI.'s time, who wrote in Latin and whose work is now entirely lost, upheld it.

Raphael Holinshed, a chronicler, who died in 1580, tells the story in detail and says the lady was the queen, which surely rather spoils the significance of the legend. Sir Harris Nicolas himself thinks the story is not improbable, although he urges the fact that Jean Froissart, who is the best contemporary authority on the reign of Edward III., while he has much to say about the order in his hundredth chapter, does not refer to it, and Nicholas admits that this tells very much against the supposed origin of the story, but Froissart may have thought the matter too trivial to relate. By the way, I feel very much aggrieved that G. C. Macaulay in the abridged volume of Froissart that he published through the Macmillans should have ruthlessly cut this hundredth chapter.

It is not, I may add, claimed that the incident caused the foundation of the Order of the Garter, but only that it gave Edward III. the idea for naming the order which he had resolved to found in any case. In the absence of any other solution than that which rests on these shadowy foundations I think we may still go on accepting the pretty legend, but I repeat my expression of dissatisfaction with the popular histories that they should leave such matters as this severely alone.—London Sphere.

CASE FOR JEWELS.

Better and More Convenient Than the Ordinary Box.

The little case for jewels shown in the illustration is a decidedly better receptacle for pins, brooches and rings than the ordinary jewel box in which unworn articles are tossed about and soon tarnish. It is especially useful when traveling, as it occupies so small a space—in fact, one of small size may be worn pinned to the corset or carried in the little hand bag with the purse, handkerchief, etc.

CHAMOIS LINED JEWEL CASE.

It is comparatively simple to make, but great care should be taken to do the work neatly; otherwise it will be anything but satisfactory.

The center part should be slightly padded with cotton wool, so that pins may be easily stuck into it. The upper and lower portions are fitted with six little pockets, with flaps of chamois that fold over and button down and in which may be carried rings, chains and other trinkets.

The case folds up and is fastened with ribbons. A nice idea is to have the outside of silk in a pretty design, with the lining of chamois skin, or if the silk should be in a solid color a monogram or an initial may be embroidered on the outside.—New York Mail.

A Prosperous Industry.

When the plant of the Pennsylvania Match company was erected in Bellefonte several years ago, many persons thought it an experiment that in the end would prove a losing venture. Such has not been the case, but instead it has so far proven one of the town's busiest industries. And the demands for the output of the plant have been such that they have been constantly adding new buildings of one kind or another. They are just now completing two new buildings of large proportions and have already in view the erection of another manufacturing building the size of the present one which will just double the output and in some measure help them to supply the demand for their matches which have become known all over the country. It is indeed gratifying to know that such industries as the Pennsylvania Match company, Lingle's foundry and machine shops, the Yeager Swing Manufacturing company and the Bellefonte shirt factory are meeting with the success they are, and always busy, thus proving very creditable seconds to the furnaces and limestone operations surrounding Bellefonte. May they all be compelled to double their plants to meet the demands for their products.

Little Girl's Finger is now Her Nose.

At a special clinic at the John Hopkins hospital recently, Dr. J. M. Finney showed the surgeons of the Southern association the photograph of a little girl absolutely without a nose. Then he brought forward the girl showing a perfectly formed nose, one of flesh and blood.

"This nose [illegible] from child's little finger," explained the doctor; and then he told how he grafted the finger to the face, afterward amputating it. The operation was performed only five weeks ago.

Dr. Finney also described the peculiarity of a similar operation upon a base ball player. After the finger had been transplanted to the face, it was discovered that a trace of the finger nail, about as big as a course hair, had not been removed, and that it persisted in growing The poor man has to trim the finger nail on his nose regularly.

The Spring Election.

Less than two months will elapse until the spring election, and at that time there will be some very important offices to fill, among them being councilmen, school directors and a borough treasurer. It is of utmost importance that intelligent and progressive men be chosen for these as well as other municipal offices The government of Bellefonte needs practical businessmen in its legislative department and so does the school board—men who are broad enough to provide for the future as well as the present Municipal improvements are in order in every progressive town and Bellefonte must not lag behind. The voters should therefore take an interest in this election and see that good capable men are chosen. The democrats, especially, should be on the alert for available candidates. As treasurer of Bellefonte, Wm. B. Rankins time expires. When it comes to the Council the term of Harry Keller, in the North Ward; James Seibert, in the South ward; and Peter Keichline in the West ward, expire. The school directors whose term expire are H. C. Quigley, in the North ward; Hon. W. C. Heinle, in the South ward; and James K. Barnhart in the West ward. Good men should be also chosen in every other borough and township in the county.

Women as Well as Men Are Made Miserable by Kidney Trouble.

Kidney trouble preys upon the mind, discourages and lessens ambition; beauty, vigor and cheerfulness soon disappear when the kidneys are out of order or diseased.

Kidney trouble has become so prevalent that it is not uncommon for a child to be born afflicted with weak kidneys. If the child urinates too often, if the urine scalds the flesh or if, when the child reaches an age when it should be able to control the passage, it is yet afflicted with bed-wetting, depend upon it, the cause of the difficulty is kidney trouble, and the first step should be towards the treatment of these important organs. This unpleasant trouble is due to a diseased condition of the kidneys and bladder and not to a habit as most people suppose.

Women as well as men are made miserable with kidney and bladder trouble, and both need the same great remedy. The mild and the immediate effect of Swamp-Root is soon realized. It is sold by druggists, in fifty-cent and one dollar sizes. You may have a sample bottle by mail free, also pamphlet telling all about it, including many of the thousands of testimonial letters received from sufferers cured. In writing Dr. Kilmer & Co., Binghamton, N. Y., be sure and mention this paper.

"Quincy Adams Sawyer," Pure, Rich and Natural.

"As pure as a flower, as rich as a field of golden grain, and as true to nature as a hollyhock on a country roadside" is what a leading daily recently said of the great New England Play, "Quincy Adams Sawyer" which comes here Friday January 4th 1907, at Garmans opera house.

It is because of its purity, its sweetness, and its fidelity to nature that this great rural drama, standing alone and indivisible in its class has won unstinted admiration from the great army of play goers quick to recognize and appreciate a piece of stage life "that holds the mirror up to nature." "Quincy Adams Sawyer" is the sort of play that appeals to all classes. City bred folks enjoy the characters and pictures they have known in other years, while rural folks are pleased with having their own people set before them in the mimic world, and the happy mingling of comedy and pathos please both the devotees of humor as well as the lover of sentiment.

A well selected company, splendid scenery, and a careful regard of detail in stage effects, go to make up a complete production.

LAST MAN FEAST.

Survivor of Club Formed In 1847 Sups and Drinks Alone.

The last banquet of the Raging Tads has been held, says a Covington (Ind.) correspondent of the New York Sun.

At the home of Mr. and Mrs. W. D. Coffing in Covington Lewis R. Hetfield, the last survivor of the famous organization, carved the turkey and drank wine in the memory of his dead chums on Thanksgiving night just past, thus complying with an agreement made just fifty-nine years ago.

It was far from a jovial affair, this last banquet of the once merriest club in Covington.

On Thanksgiving day, 1847, twenty young men of Covington organized a club that became known as the Raging Tads because of the inclination of its members to make merry at its feasts, which were held each Thanksgiving day.

At the first supper it was agreed that the club should have a supper each Thanksgiving day until only one man of the twenty survived. Then he was to open a bottle of port wine that was on the table at the first supper and which has graced the banquet table each year since.

At 6:30 o'clock on Thanksgiving evening Lewis R. Hetfield, eighty-four years old, the last survivor of the club, entered the dining room of the home of Mr. and Mrs. Coffing. The table was arranged for a feast, the same as it had been on fifty-nine previous Thanksgiving days. Mr. Hetfield carved the turkey, then opened the bottle and drank to the memory of the nineteen merrymakers who had passed beyond. After he had paid this silent tribute to his dead chums he was joined at the table by Mrs. Hetfield and a number of other relatives and friends, among them the widow of Colonel James McMannomy, a member of the club, who died last July. Other relatives of dead members of the club sat at the table.

Mr. Hetfield told stories of the old boys and tried to make the affair one of good cheer, but it bore a touch of sadness that was not easily thrown off.

CITIES FOR WORKINGMEN.

Rev. Dr. Bliss to Lead a Movement In America Begun In England.

The Rev. Dr. William Dwight Porter Bliss, for four years rector of St. Mary's Protestant Episcopal church at Amityville, N. Y., has tendered his resignation, to take effect on Jan. 1, says an Amityville special to the New York Times. He will become secretary of the Garden Cities of America, an association formed recently to found and develop cities for laboring men. The movement is patterned after the Garden City association of Great Britain, which is now building its first city at Letchworth, in Heartshire.

The Rev. Dr. Bliss is an Amherst graduate. He is a Socialist and in 1887 was the nominee of the labor party for lieutenant governor of Massachusetts.

The object of the association is the founding of cities where men of small means may have attractive homes with their own gardens and to combine as far as possible the attractions of both city and country.

Ex-Senator John Lewis Childs is in the association, and President Ralph Peters of the Long Island railroad is vice president. On the board of managers are Bishop Burgess and Bishop Potter and other men of prominence.

ROCK CLIMBING FISH.

Young Pugilist Took an Unidentified Specimen From the Sea.

While Young Corbett, the prize fighter, who is training at his quarters in Stratford, Conn., was taking his exercise along Long Island sound the other day he noticed a peculiar animal climbing a rock and, taking an oar out of a rowboat, struck it on the head, says a special dispatch from Bridgeport, Conn., to the New York World. With the assistance of Augustus Wood, one of his trainers, he tied the denizen of the sea to the rear of an automobile and brought it to Bridgeport.

It weighs thirty pounds and has two winglike fins and two small feet, which it used to climb on rocks. The fish has a mouth ten inches in length and a pair of horns. It is over three feet long and eighteen inches across the back. No such species of fish was ever seen in these waters.

We're a-goin' ter git dinner ready, an' when we calls yer, yer ter come 'ome and chuck the fings about." "Ho!" said Bobby. "Come 'ome drunk, do I? And why for?" "Why for, stoopid?" retorted the girl, with a glance of mingled scorn and pity. "Ain't it Saturday?"

Bloomsburg citizens Discover They Don't Own Hospital.

The people of Bloomsburg have just awakened to the fact that the Joseph Ratti hospital of that place belongs to the dead man's estate and not to the town. Joseph Ratti was a wealthy Italian citizen and was in life noted for his generosity, and for his many gifts to that town. The present situation of the hospital authorities in complex to say the least and they don't just know where they are at.

Don't be Afraid of Fresh Air.

The season of the year is at hand when tuberculosis gets its work with most deadly effect. The cold, raw days of winter are particularly conducive to spread of this disease, not because people insist upon shutting themselves up in superheated rooms without proper ventilation. If more care were given to the question of ventilation there would be fewer cases of the white plague to record every year, The most dangerous fear in the world is the fear of fresh air.

THE MASQUERADE SKATE.

Large and Appreciative Audience Present—Fine Music.

Fully five hundred people assembled in the large armory on Spring street Tuesday evening to witness what was never seen in Bellefonte before, a "Masquerade Skate." Some thirty young people had donned a peculiar garb of some kind with a shield over their faces and it was impossible to distinguish any of them. They were magnificent skaters and well costumed and their certainly must have been a battle between the judges to whom the prizes should be awarded.

During the grand march which was the same as a grand march at a regular ball only the participants were on skates and sometimes they would bump into one another and some one would set on the floor, but in an instant they would be up and spinning along with the rest again.

When they passed before the judges, Messrs Thomas Harter, George R. Meek, and Charles Kurtz, they all endeavored to look their best, and carried themselves just as gracefully, for they all wanted to have the honor of winning one of the prizes.

It was announced that the judges had made their decision and the young ladies and gentlemen were lined up in a row, while Mr. Harter complimented all on their beautiful costumes, especially the ladies and said that he would like to give the entire lot a present but that only two were to receive prizes at this time.

The lady wearing the most beautiful and unique costume was Miss Eva Showers of North Spring street She was attired in a long red dress with bright trimmings with a headgear representing a crown, her hair hanging down in long curls over the shoulders. She was indeed a typical "Gipsy Queen." She received a pair of Samuel Winslow nickel plated skates with the "Vineyard" roller. The men's prize went to Wilson Gephart. He was dressed in a sheperds plaid, wearing a high silk hat and had his hands and face blackened. Wilson is certainly a most magnificent skater and no doubt the judges had this also under consideration when they awarded him the prize. He received a pair of the Winslow skate. The skates are valued at $8.00.

The other young people in the grand march were as follows: Wallace Gephart, Frank Smith, James Lose, Jessie Derstine, Hugh Taylor, Jr. Vincent Taylor, and Harold Storm. Misses Helen Mingle, Roxie Mingle, Bernace Taylor, Lillian Taylor, Daisy Barnes and Rose Gamble.

Mr. E. R. Taylor is to be complimented upon the success of the "Skate," and it is to be hoped that he will repeat affairs of this kind in the future.

Who are the Dale Murderers?

On the 12th of January it will be two months since Josiah Dale was cruelly murdered on the Nittany mountains and as yet no one has been arrested for the foul crime. Is this good man's death to go unpunished? or will some one have to suffer for it. It is to be hoped whoever the criminals are that they will soon be caught and justice dealt out to them.

Moshannon.

Hello! Readers! Here we are again, after two weeks, of enjoyment and feasting. The most delightful and happy season of the year is now over, and we hope that all may return to their labors with renewed energies and good resolutions for a happy and prosperous year.

A Christmas entertainment was given in the M. E. church, consisting of singing, recitations and speeches, by several membersof the Sunday school. The exercises were appropriate and well given after which a treat was given to every member of the school, and many little hearts were made happy.

This week, skating and coasting has been one of the amusements enjoyed by many of the young folks (and some of the old ones too) in which all seemed to take great pleasure, and especially those who are now wearing court plaster on their faces.

Jackey Walker moved this week to Kylertown, Clearfield county, where he is employed as teamster by one of the leading business men of that "city."

A new arrival came to the home of Jacob Collar, on Dec 23d. It is a bouncing big boy, and by all accounts he has come to stay and is not a "skiddoo" baby.

Eva McGown. was a Bellefonte visitor and shopper just before Christmas.

Elizabeth Fleming. of Morrisdale Mines, spent a few days with friends here recently.

James Cooley didn't need to go to Bellefonte to the dentist, "to have his eye teeth cut."

Isabelle Beates, of Pine Glenn. was a Moshannon visitor lately.

John Williamson, a former resident of this place, spent Christmas with his parents here.

Miss Carrie Shilling, of Clintondale, was the guest this week of Miss Mary Lomison.

Abraham Hanscome; of Winburne, was a Christmas visitor with friends and relatives here.

Mrs. Boston Viehdorfer, of Lewistown, at one time a resident of our town, visited many of her friends here over Christmas.

Paul McGown, of Jersey Shore; Albert Lucas, of Yarnell; Wm. Williamson, Jr., of LaJose; Mrs Alex Black, of Clearfield; Miss Minnie McGown, of Pittsburg; Miss Lucy Fleming, of Cherry Tree; and Miss Laura Williams, of Gorton, visited their homes here over Christmas.

Walter Fye spent Christmas with his uncle, near Howard.

Prof Snyder took advantage of the holiday season and visited his home in Tioga county,

Sadie Wiggins, was a pleasant caller in Moshannon on Friday last.

We are sorry to make note this week of the illness of Lucas' accommodating and hustling delivery boy—Clinton Cramer,

The Modern Literary Society, held their regular meeting on Friday night, which was well attended. An excellent program was well rendered. The recitations by Albert Lucas, James Gleason and Jennie Lucas, were fine. The debate was decidedly interesting. The question resolved, that there is more pleasure in the summer than in the winter, was quite well discussed, and decided in favor the negetive. The paper, the Yule-Tide Greeting by Eva McGown was a fine piece of literature and much credit is due the editors for their efforts.

Doctors Say Smoking Cigarettes is the cause.

Charles Kettler, brother of Albert Kettler, who fatally shot himself at Lock Haven, continues to be unfortunate. He got out of the Williamsport hospital Monday, after a spell of heart trouble that rendered him unconscious on the street on Saturday, and Tuesday night was again in such condition as to have to be taken to the hospital. He had gone to Wilson and Railway streets to see a Christmas tree, and had just finished looking at it when he fell over, suffering the second attack of heart failure.

The hospital physicians attribute his condition to the excessive use of cigarettes They state that his heart has become in bad shape and if he continues to smoke as much as he has been doing the habit will end in his death.

Fountainville, Pa., Feb. 16, 1902.
S. B. Hartman, M. D.

Dear Sir: I have been thinking of writing to you for some time to let you know what Peruna did for me.

I am 57 years old. I lost my health about six or seven years ago. I first had dyspepsia and employed different doctors.

Last year I injured one of my kidneys. I had one of the best doctors for that. He put me to bed, not to move for two weeks.

I slowly recovered, but was so weak and prostrated that I could walk but a short distance. In fact I had to keep quiet.

I took several remedies, but obtained no relief. I also had catarrh in some form.

My wife advised me to take Peruna, and it is with pleasure that I can say that by taking one and one-half bottle of your Peruna, it cured me and I feel all right. I send this with many thanks to you, as I enjoy life again.

My wife has also been taking your Peruna for asthma and it helps to relieve her. We keep your Peruna in the house constantly. Again I say I thank you for Peruna.

Sincerely yours,
PHILIP KRATZ.

Fountainville, Pa., Nov. 9, 1903.
Dr. S. B. Hartman.

Dear Sir: I have good health now and your valuable medicine gave me good health. I have had no doctor for some time, as I do not need any. When I take cold I take Peruna and in a short time I am all right. My wife is subject to asthma. She takes Peruna at that time, and she has had no need for a doctor for some time. With many thanks for your medicine, we remain,

Sincerely yours,
PHILIP KRATZ.

Fountainville, Pa., April 16, 1906.
Dr. S. B. Hartman.

Dear Sir: We have Peruna in the house all the time and when we think we need it, we take it. We are about sixty years old and have not called a doctor to our place for some years.

We go out in all kinds of weather and sometimes when we go on a trip we take Peruna along. A preventive is better than a cure. That has been our experience.

I had poor health some years ago and when I found your medicine I hit the right thing. We both thank you for your good medicine.

Sincerely yours,
PHILIP KRATZ.

Witness to Signatures.

I, John Donnelly, Mayor of Doylestown, Pa., have been acquainted with Mr. Philip Kratz for 25 years. I know him to be an honorable and useful citizen. He, in my presence, signed the above statements concerning Peruna, which I have every reason to believe are true in all particulars.

Death of David Rothrock

David Rothrock, a well known citizen of Benner township, died on Thursday evening, Dec. 20th, at his home near Fillmore, after an illness of almost a year. His death was due to the infirmities incident to old age. He was seventy-five years of age and is survived by his wife four sons and one daughter. He was a successful farmer, an active Republican and held many township offices including that of Justice of the Peace in Benner township. He was a member of the Methodist church and a highly respected christian gentleman.

The funeral took place Monday at ten o'clock. Interment in Meyer's cemetery.

SHORT SKIRTS BEST.

Should girls wear short skirts?

Why not? If they have the sense to do it. Is there anything neater and trimmer than a well-cut kilted skirt clearing the ground by two inches or more, and showing a pair of high-laced boots? It is the last thing in smartness for rainy weather, and never was there a fashion more hygienic than that of the "trottoir" skirt, says an English authority.

In France where they know how to dress, and where economy has been elevated to an art, no self-respecting woman would appear outside her own house, if there was a speck of mud in the streeets, in a dress that would touched the ground. In Germany, where one is a housewife first and a woman afterwar rs, it would be a heart-breaking spectacle to the neighbors if one sauntered out casually in the morning in a dress that did not betoken the stern business of catering for one's household by being held high from the street by a steel arrangement that fastened round the waist.

In Spain and Italy those women who do not drive in carriages all wear skirts to their ankles, and you never see the American lady tourist clutching a bunch of skirt in one hand while with the other she graps fieldglass, handbag and umbrella. Is England, then, the only nation that would doom its women to sloppy untidiness of costume because the modesty of the men must not be shocked by the sight of a well-turned ankle and a pretty foot? The days have gone by when we were asked to be merely graceful ornaments of society. Let us at least dress as we please.

To-day, when he marries, man seeks a companion for the hard tramp over the hills and dales of life, then let him cease from admiring the damsel who is a vision of beauty in cheap lace and turn his attention instead to the girl who shows that she has learned the habits of economy and neatness, the girl who has probably paid for her gown with her own hard-earned money, the girl with the short skirt.

Typhoid Takes Fresh Turn for the Worse.

Forty-nine new cases of typhoid fever were reported today. The 700 mark has now been passed, the total number being 701. Six deaths were also reported again today. Those who died were: Joseph Liberton, 19 years old, of Robinson street; Miss Mary Malloy, of Bellevue; Lillian Knittle, 28 years old, of Jefferson avenue; Patrick Grier, of Monroe, avenue; James J. Clark, of Dunmore, and Miss Harriet Chamberlain, of Wilkesbarre, the latter said to have contracted the disease here.

New cases reported today are distributed as follows: West Scranton, 16; Central City, 9; Green Ridge, 18; South Scranton, 6.

Dr. Moulton and the city authorities endeavored today to prove the report, which reached them last night, that there had been a case of typhoid in a family by the name of Dennis, at the headwaters of the Elmhurst reservoir, during the month of September, but were unable to do so. All the physicians in that part of the county were questioned, but denied treating such a case. The authority for the report is so reliable that the investigation will be continued.

Drastic measures are to be taken with reference to the conditions in the foreign settlements, so that a thorough inspection of these localities can be made and any ignored or concealed cases of the fever brought to light. Three policemen have been detailed, and it will be their duty to visit these sections and seek out any cases that might exist.

They will also report all cases of protracted illness of any kind that they may discover, so that the health authorities may ascertain whether or not it is a typhoid case. These sections will also be thoroughly disinfected, and for this purpose nine teams and wagons in the public works department are being used by the health department for the distribution of lime.

Wife Tickled His Tootsies.

After two years of complaints and cross complaints and four trials of the case, one of which resulted in a decision favorable to the husband, which decision was afterward revoked, a divorce was granted Walter E. Petty, a wealthy young Muncie (Ind.) man, from Mrs. Maud Petty in Denver.

The case was hard fought, and the scene of it was in two states. It is estimated that Petty paid out at least $10,000 and perhaps as much as $15,000 in his efforts to free himself. Petty formerly was known in Indiana as manager and owner of the Muncie team in the Western Roller Polo league. Petty was granted the decree on the ground of desertion.

In one of his complaints Petty averted that his wife tickled the soles of his feet with a feather with he was confined to bed by illness, tormenting him until he almost mad.

The two ran away to Newport, Ky and were married in spite of parental objections when they were only seventeen years old. They are about twent-eight years old now.

Kidnaped child Made Speechless.

Starved, maltreated and given powerful drugs that almost paralyzed his vocal cords, George Brucato, aged 4 years, was turned adrift in Brooklyn by his kidnapers after ten days' captivity. The child is now at his parents' home, 28 Stanton street, Philadelphia, but his captors have succeeded so far in their attempt to keep the child from giving the police any clew to their identity.

The child with a shawl pinned around his shoulders, and his shoes and clothing muddy, was found late last night by a policeman sitting on a curbstone crying. The boy would only say that his name was George, and that he wanted something to eat. He was taken to a police station, fed and his clothes dried and then to the Children's Society, where the matron suspected he might be the Brucato child, and his father, Alfonso, sent for this morning. Alfonso was beside himself with joy and hurried the boy home, where he lay in his mother's arms paying no attention to the bright new toys showered upon him.

His eyes stared blankly around, and his face was distorted. Gentle questioning could bring nothing of importance from him, dazed as he was by starvation, exposure and threats. "Eat" and "mother" were the only words he could utter, and these he repeated time and time again.

Detective Sergeant Petrosino questioned the boy and his parents time and time again without result. From the latter he learned that the woman's uncle, Fransisco Mauro, wanted them to let their daughter marry his son, and quarrelled when they refused. Mauro lives in Brooklyn—his address the police can not find—near where the child was found. The police think the baby was turned loose in this neighborhood as a blind. Brucato received two Black Hand letters demanding $1000, but he is a poor man and there was no hope of his giving it.

The fact that a shawl was pinned over the boys's shoulders led to the belief that a woman was concerned in the case.

The Beauty Seekers.

A bad-tempered woman can never be beautiful.

A well balanced admiration of one's self is a great beautifier.

Cultivate graciousness, for it is nature's greatest beautifier.

Daintiness has come to be the modern woman's chief charm.

Harmony in dress pleases more eyes than costly gewgaws,

If you have no thought for yourself, remember that others admire beauty.

Beauty may be only skin deep, but it has more value than most kinds of plating.

Things which beautify an old woman may detract from the appearance of the young girl.

French women never allow themselves nor anyone else to suggest that they are growing old.

Don't wait until tomorrow to think of the graceful form and comely face, for by that time middle age settles and formidable crow's feet will be with you to stay.—Philadelphia Press.

Why Taft Defends Discharge of Negro Troops

Only Means of Ridding Army of a Band of Would Be Murderers, Says Secretary of War.

Conduct of Battalion, Some of Whom Attacked Citizens of Brownsville, Tex., Severely Condemned—Troops Clearly to Blame For Their Plight—Charges a "Conspiracy of Silence" and Declares All Members of Accused Battalion Must Have Known Something of Night Assault.

IN his annual report Secretary Taft devotes considerable space to a defense and an explanation of the course of the war department in connection with the discharge without honor of the battalion of the Twenty-fifth infantry (colored), which was stationed at Brownsville, Tex., last summer. The secretary details the events of the night of Aug. 13, involving the "shooting up" of the town of Brownsville by anywhere from nine to twenty members of this battalion. He states that last June objections were made to the stationing of this battalion at Fort Brown by a resident of Brownsville in a letter transmitted to the war department through Senator C. A. Culberson of Texas. After explaining in a letter to the senator why the negro troops were sent to Brownsville despite the protests of citizens of that place the secretary proceeds:

"The battalion was accordingly sent to Fort Brown in command of Major C. W. Penrose and arrived there July 28, 1906. Soon after its arrival unfortunate differences arose between the enlisted men and some townspeople. As is usual in such cases, there was contradictory evidence as to the cause for the troubles, though they were doubtless due primarily to the resentment of certain of the townspeople at the proximity of a negro battalion. The feeling of the enlisted men was also aroused by a discrimination insisted on in most of the saloons of the town, in which separate bars were provided for them. No serious injury was done to any of the colored soldiers, although one of them was knocked down by a government official named Tate with a clubbed revolver for jostling his wife, as he charged, and another was pushed off a gangplank by a customs inspector into the mud of the Rio Grande because drunk and disorderly, as it was claimed.

"On the 12th of August it was reported in Brownsville that a white woman was seized by the hair by a colored soldier and dragged on the ground. This report among the townspeople caused great bitterness and excitement of feeling, which gave such concern to the officers of the battalion that on the night of the same day they sent patrols into the town to bring back their soldiers to the fort. A few minutes after 12 o'clock midnight of the next day, Aug. 13—i. e., on the morning of Aug. 14—shots were fired in the fort toward the town from the neighborhood of each barrack of the three companies. The fort is really in the town and only separated from the houses by a wall. The first shots seem to have been fired in the air. Immediately afterward a number of men, variously estimated from nine to twenty, climbed over the wall between the fort and the town. There was much direct evidence that these men were colored soldiers in khaki and blue shirts, carrying the new service rifle. From seventy-five to a hundred cartridge shells and used clips and some undischarged cartridges were found upon the streets of the town the next morning, and Major Penrose, commanding the battalion, then identified them as ammunition for the new service rifle and reluctantly admitted their conclusive weight as evidence that the shooting was done by some of his men.

"Shooting Up" the Town.

"The raiders advanced up an alley leading from the fort through the town and first fired into the room of a house on the alley at the end of the first block, in which were two women and five children. One of the bullets knocked over and put out a lighted lamp on the table in the room. Ten shots were fired, nearly all going through the house at about four and a half feet above the floor. The raiders then encountered the chief of police on a horse. He had heard the shooting and hurried toward the sound. When he saw the soldiers, the number of whom he estimated to be fifteen, he turned and tried to escape. They fired on him, killed his horse and wounded him in the arm so that it had to be amputated. Two policemen who had separated from him were also shot at. A bullet pierced the hat of one of them. The raiders then fired into Miller's hotel, on the alley at the end of the second block. Six bullet holes were found in the hotel the next day.

"The party then divided. One squad proceeded farther down the alley to the third block toward a saloon, where the colored men must drink at a separate bar. The barkeeper heard them coming and attempted to close the door, but was shot and instantly killed [illegible] was declared by a competent surgeon with army experience to have been made by a bullet of the caliber of those used in the service rifle. A Mexican in the same saloon was shot in the hand. The other squad shot into a house next to the house of the man who had, as already related, knocked down one of the enlisted men with a revolver. The shots were all aimed at about five or six feet above the floor and went through the mosquito bars in which a woman and two children were sleeping. Bullet marks were found on other houses in the neighborhood. There was much evidence of expressions uttered by the raiders as they advanced and shot, indicating their malicious and murderous intent.

Officers Take Prompt Action.

"The first volley awakened many of the sleeping garrison and attracted the attention of the sentinel, who discharged his gun three times and called the guard. The sergeant of the guard called out the guard, and then he directed the call to arms to the battalion. The bugle sounded, and the men rushed to the gun racks, which the sergeants and corporals in charge say had not been opened until they opened them with the keys which had been in their possession for more than twelve hours. One gun rack was broken open in the hurry of the men to answer the call to arms. The commissioned officers were awakened by the firing, dressed hurriedly and came out to call the roll of the men of the various companies. They supposed that an attack had been made upon the barracks by men in the town and did not know until some hours later that the shooting had been done by soldiers and that their men were suspected of any offense. As soon as they were informed of the facts by the mayor they caused all the rifles of the enlisted men to be examined. Every rifle was then found to be clean.

"The evidence makes it quite clear that the firing had not ceased when the men began to form in line and therefore that all the guns with which the firing was done could not have been in the racks when the sergeants in charge of quarters went to unlock the racks, although they testified that they were there. It is also certain that during the formation of the companies or immediately after the men who had done the shooting must have returned to their places so as to respond to the roll call or that some one answered for them. One or two enlisted men testified that the first shooting was done outside the fort, that it was accompanied by cries indicating hostility to the soldiers and that the bullets were directed toward the barracks, but not the slightest trace of any bullet holes could be found in the barracks, and the great weight of the testimony indicates that these witnesses were mistaken. The facts as stated appear from the careful investigation and report of Major Blocksom of the inspector general's corps of the army, supplemented by affidavits and oral examination of many witnesses, conducted by a citizens' committee at the invitation of Major Penrose, and by the report of Major Penrose. Major Blocksom began his investigation three days after the occurrence.

Penalty For Conspiracy of Silence.

"Since the occurrence every effort has been made by the commissioned officers and by competent military inspectors sent for the purpose through cross examination of each member of the company who was present in the fort that night to find some clew by which the enlisted men who committed this crime could be detected, and not the slightest evidence tending to establish the identity of a single man has been forthcoming. All the enlisted men of the battalion were advised that if evidence was not forthcoming leading to the identification of those who planned and committed these murders and attempted murders it would become necessary to discharge all the men present at Fort Brown that night without honor and to bar them from re-enlistment in the army or service in the navy or in the civil service.

"Inspector General Garlington then examined every man who came within the operation of the proposed order and was entirely unable to elicit a single circumstance leading to the identification of the murderers. He became convinced that there was a conspiracy of silence in the battalion to protect the criminals, and, while he conceded that there might be a number of men in the battalion innocent both of the crime and of suppression of evidence, he deemed it necessary in the interest and for the good of the service to recommend the issuing of the order which by authority he had told the men would be made and enforced unless evidence pointing to the criminals was forthcoming. This department concurred in General Garlington's recommendation, and the president then directed the discharge of certain named members of the battalion, which included all the enlisted men of the battalion who were present at Fort Brown on the night in question, without honor, and forever debarred them from re-enlisting in the army or navy of the United States as well as from employment in any civil capacity under the government. The order of discharge has been duly executed.

The order has attracted much attention and has been severely criticised as unjust because it condemns many innocent men to undeserved punishment. It is not improper, therefore, in this report to review the case and state the reasons which not only justified it, but made it necessary.

"First.—Out of a battalion of 170 enlisted men in the army of the United States from nine to twenty men formed a preconcerted plan to revenge themselves upon the people of a town in which they were stationed for the insults they felt that the townspeople had heaped upon them. In accordance with the plan, they left their barracks under cover of the darkness—about midnight—and proceeded to discharge their weapons into the houses of the town for the purpose of killing those against whom they felt a grievance. They came very near killing some one or more of the three women and seven children who were sitting or sleeping in two of the lighted rooms into which they fired. They, in fact, did kill one man, wound another and seriously injured the chief of police. They accompanied their firing with expressions indicating the malice which prompted their action. There can be no doubt, therefore, that the squad of men who moved together from the fort to the town and did this shooting were guilty of murder—and murder in the first degree—and that if they were discovered they could be properly subjected to capital punishment. The purpose of one was the purpose of all.

"Second.—Within ten minutes or more after this crime was committed, when the whole garrison was aroused by the noise of the fusillade and by the call to arms which followed it, the guilty men returned to their places and must have been among the last men to take their places, for the reason that the firing continued after the formations had begun. The absence of the rifles from the racks could not have escaped the attention of the sergeants who had the keys of the racks, if indeed they had the keys, and yet all the sergeants swear that the rifles were in the racks, untouched. Before the next morning all the guns were clean. It is impossible that many of the battalion who did not take part as active members of the conspiracy to murder were not made aware by one circumstance or another of the identity of the persons who committed this heinous offense.

"Third.—Instead of giving to their officers or to the military inspectors who were directed to make the examination the benefit of anything which they knew tending to lead to a conviction of the guilty persons, there was a conspiracy of silence on the part of the many who must have known something of importance in this regard. Thus the murderers were taken back into the battalion and protected entirely from punishment.

"Under these circumstances the question arises, Is the government helpless? Must it continue in its service a battalion many of the members of which show their willingness to condone a crime of a capital character committed by from ten to twenty of its members and put on a front of silence and ignorance which enables the criminals to escape just punishment. These enlisted men took the oath of allegiance to the government and were to be used under the law to maintain its supremacy. Can the government properly, therefore, keep in its employ for the purpose of maintaining law and order any longer a body of men from 5 to 10 per cent of whom can plan and commit murder and rely upon the silence of a number of their companions to escape detection?

Whole Battalion Useless.

"It may be that in the battalion are a number of men wholly innocent, who know neither who the guilty men are nor any circumstances which will aid in their detection, though this cannot be true of many. Because there may be innocent men in the battalion must the government continue to use it to guard communities of men, women and children when it contains so dangerous an element impossible of detection? Certainly not. The only means of ridding the military service of a band of would be murderers of women and children and actual murderers of one man is the discharge of the entire battalion.

"It is a mistake to suppose that this order is in itself a punishment either of the innocent or of the guilty. A discharge would be an utterly inadequate punishment for those who are guilty whether of committing the murder or of withholding or suppressing evidence which would disclose the perpetrators of such a crime. The use of the word penalty in the proceedings is a mere misnomer and is unfortunate. The dismissal from the service of the members of this battalion under the circumstances is not a punishment, however great the hardship. There is a dismissal technically known as a dishonorable discharge, which is only imposed by sentence by a court. This is a punishment. But the members of this battalion were not dishonorably discharged. They could not have been so discharged except after a trial. They were discharged for the good of the service, as the technical phrase is, 'without honor.'

Duty of Noncommissioned Officers.

"Much sympathy has been evoked for those who have been so long in the public service as some of the noncommissioned officers and others of this battalion of the Twenty-fifth infantry. It is to be said with respect to these noncommissioned officers that upon them especially falls the duty of maintaining the discipline of the companies and the battalion and that by reason of their long service and from their official authority they have more influence over the men and more opportunity to learn the circumstances leading to a detection of the guilty in this case than any others connected with the regiment. Indeed it was their peculiar duty to find out and disclose the facts, but they have failed to do so.

"The suggestion made in some quarters that this battalion has been treated in this way simply because the men are colored hardly merits notice. The fact of their color and the racial feeling aroused between them and the citizens of Brownsville may have been the cause and furnished the motive, but certainly not a justification for the plot to murder men, women and children, but to this extent only in explanation of the circumstances is the fact of their color at all relevant.

"It is possible that evidence may be adduced in future which will tend to exculpate entirely some of the men now discharged, both from participation in the crime and assistance in the conspiracy of silence to prevent the detection of the offenders, and whenever such facts are shown in respect to any one affected by the order they will be brought to your attention and, I understand, will render such persons eligible to re-enlistment."

Novel Bank For Tom Johnson.

Mayor Johnson of Cleveland, O., will inaugurate a novel system in banking methods in the conduct of his new bank, the Depositors' Savings and Trust company, says the Chicago Tribune. "The bank," said City Clerk Witt recently, "is to issue an entirely new kind of money, a sort of 'phony' money, but good, just as good as any other kind of currency. It will be in the form of a certificate of deposit that will be used as currency. For instance, if I wanted to send some friend a dollar I owed him, I would go to the bank, deposit a dollar and in return would receive a certificate. On this certificate will be printed a picture of Mayor Johnson."

"Hand Rug" Best Term For New Muff.

Cousins to fur rugs in shape, though not as large, were a couple of muffs that attracted attention in the St. Regis hotel in New York the other afternoon, says the New York Press. They were made of the whole skin of the animal, lined perfectly flat and otherwise unmanipulated. Large pockets had been prepared in the lining in such a way that when the hands were slipped into these the skin could be rolled around the hands, giving somewhat the usual appearance of a muff. When not in use the hand rug, as it might be called, hung almost as flat and formless as a simple pelt.

The Pace of Admiralty.

It is reported that Japan will see the Dreadnought and go Great Britain 3,000 tons better, laying down a battleship of 23,000 tons service displacement. Of course the mistress of the seas will not ignore the challenge, and we must prepare to hear of a British battleship of 26,000 tons, says the Boston Transcript. The Japanese, being a proud and progressive people, will not sit still and may be counted on to push the building mark on their side up to 29,000 tons. By that time our own big ship enthusiasts will wake up, and the taxpayers will be invited to contribute the cash for a floating fortress of 32,000 tons. So does the race for naval supremacy go, the mind of the competing world being at present fixed upon displacement as if there was no other factor to be taken into account.

WHAT THE KIDNEYS DO

There Unceasing Work Keeps Us Strong And Healthy.

All the blood in the body passes through the kidneys once every three minutes. The kidneys filter the blood. They work night and day. When healthy they remove about 500 grains of impure matter daily, when unhealthy some part of this impure matter is left in the blood. This brings on many diseases and symptoms—pain in the back, headache, nervousness, hot, dry skin, rheumatism, gout, gravel, disorders of the eyesight and hearing, dizziness, irregular heart, debility, drowsiness, dropsy, deposits in the urine, etc. But if you keep the filters right you will have no trouble with your kidneys.

W. R. Camp, of the firm of Kirk-Camp Furniture Co., Logan Ave. and 14th St., Tyrone, Pa., says: "Experience has taught me that Doan's Kidney Pills is an excellent remedy and one that strictly fulfills its promises. In the fall of 1897 I gave for publication in our local papers a statement covering my experience with this remedy and recommending it to others, and now in the month of June, 1904, I just as enthusiastically recommend it as I did at that time. Doan's kidney pills completely relieved me of an aching in the small of my back and lameness through the loins due to kidney trouble. We always keep this preparation in the house for use in case of need, and it has never failed to give splendid satisfaction. I heartily endorse it.

A Card of Thanks.

I wish to thank my pupils for the substantial and well chosen presents given me on Christmas eve. The gifts were of value in themselves, but the thought expressed by them for their teacher in days gone by, is very dear and will be homed in my heart, but can not be fully expressed in words.

They call up to memory the most pleasant associations of my life. The visit made me by the committee of seven, the perfect number, was a delightful surprise—a committee of those who as pupils contributed so much to the character and success of the Academy and who since their school days closed have done and are doing so much by their personal worth and influence to adorn and elevate every sphere in which they have been called to act. The letters, too, from those at a distance, containing such good words of friendship and esteem will be treasured among my brightest memories. I consider this presentation one of the happiest events of my life, the reflection of which will insure me pleasure to the end of my days.

Your ever affectionate teacher.

Pays to be Good Natured.

Does it pay to be good-natured? Well, that depends. The world has another name for the good-natured man. He is a "easy mark." In an office such a man is asked to do more work than his difficult or grumpy colleagues. Outside of it he is pestered by the demands and impositions of his friends. People take perpetual advantage of him—among them his own wife. "Oh, he don't mind," is the way they put it.

The ill-natured man goes through life with things made easy for him. Nobody thinks of asking him to do his share of work; rather he is let off with a little less than his share. In any home it is not the strongest will but the weakest temper that rules. The house is directed with constant and anxious regard to the tantrums of its ill natured member. As Thackeray said of the testy little whip snapper, Sir Barnes Newcome, such a man "goes through life better served and better hated" than other men. He wants what he wants when he wants it. He says right out—and he gets it.

These wise sayings about the benefits of a sunny heart and a smiling countenance—are they then all wrong? No. They are like the maxim that honesty is the best policy. The man who follows the maxim strictly may never be very wealthy; certainly he will never become a multi-millionaire. But he will never have his conscience calling him a thief and poisoning a gilded leisure with its reproaches. So with the ill natured man. He will have the pick of material comforts and advantages—the easiest job in his office, the best chop on his table, the warmest seat at the fire. But when he has all these things, what has he after all?

They have come to him at the cost of that cheer and serenity and sunny out look, that sense of giving rather than getting, which makes the easiest mark rejoice in his burdens and deprivations, and which alone makes life worth while.

Boy of 8 Walked 16 Miles Hunting for Santa Claus.

Pottstown, Dec. 25.—Little Stanley Pulaski, who is only eight years old, does not understand that Santa Claus is more liberal in his gifts to the children of rich folks than he is to the little boys whose fathers are not wealthy, and, when he woke up Tuesday morning and put his hand down in his stocking and found nothing there, he thought the old Saint had merely forgotten to stop at the Pulaski home, which is in Reading.

"So," said Stanley to Burgess Colier, of Pottstown, "I thought I'd go out and try to find him and tell him that he had gone past our house without stopping.

"I walked and walked and walked," the tired little fellow confided to the kindly burgess, "until the policeman stopped me and brought me here to you, but I couldn't find Santa Claus."

The child had, however found the very fellow he was looking for, though he did not know it. For Burgess Coller, touched by the boy's weary face and pathetic experience, played the part quite as well as he would be expected to play it even for his own children, and other persons in the City Hall lent their aid, too.

Stanley had walked all the way from Reading to this place, a distance of sixteen miles, before he was stopped by anyone. A policeman here saw that the child was almost worn out. He was, in fact, utterly exhausted from the long walk and the cold. But he told the officer that he would like to go on, for, he said, he "must find Santa Claus."

Tuesday evening the child's parents, summoned by wire, came for him and took him back to the Reading home with armsful of presents which Santa Claus forgot to leave Christmas eve.

JAPANESE ARE FEWER

Commissoner Sargent has Returned Home From the Hawaiian Island

LABOR SCRARCE THERE

He Found the Owners of Various Plantations in Need of People to do Work

JAPS FLOCKING TO THE TEXAS BORDER

Washington, December 27.—A report on Japanese conditions in the Hawaiian islands will be made to President Roosevelt by Frank P. Sargent, commissioner of immigration and naturalization as a result of his recent visit to the islands.

Commissioner Sargent expressed the opinion that there are fewer Japanese in the Hawaiian islands now than there were two years ago, a greater number having come to America in that period than arrived in Hawaii. Miki Salto, the Japanese consul general at Honolulu inmated to Mr. Sargent that the Japanese government discouraged its people from coming to the United States because of its knowledge of the conditions existing in this country, especially on the Pacific coast, and it was apprehensive lest the coming here of great numbers of Japanese might induce prejudice against them that would be embarrassing.

The commissioner of immigration found that the owners of sugar, pineapple and other plantations in the island are in serious need of labor and many Japanese are coming to the islands to work on them. He says that it is the effort of the Hawaiian planters to diversify foreign labor so far as may be possible not confining it to any one race but getting people from all quarters of the world. Many more plantations would be operated on the islands if it were possible to obtain the necessary laborers, but up to the present time labor has been scarce. It is expected that the arrival in the islands of European laborers will provide a solution of the Hawaiian labor situation problem.

El Paso, Texas, December 27. Japanese are flocking to the Rio Grande border attempting to get into the United States. Most of them are said to have been discharged from the Japan army. Yesterday fifty four were refused admission here. Later a number were smuggled over at Fort Hancock, Texas, but were recaptured by immigration officials who are patrolling the entire border.

Impoverished Soil

Impoverished soil, like impoverished blood, needs a proper fertilizer. A chemist by analyzing the soil can tell you what fertilizer to use for different products.

If your blood is impoverished your doctor will tell you what you need to fertilize it and give it the rich, red corpuscles that are lacking in it. It may be you need a tonic, but more likely you need a concentrated fat food and fat is the element lacking in your system.

There is no food that is so easily digested and assimilated as

One of the most pathetic things in the world is the worry and pinching, the bitter and persistent economy necessary to many faithful, hard-working girls in the large cities. A writer in the New York Sun relates a conversation which took place in a late subway train in that city. The car was nearly empty. Among the passengers was a little party of shop-girls bound for the Bronx. They were discussing the possibility of a girl living on fifty cents a day, for food, in New York City. The girl with the red hat declared her belief that it could not be done.

"But I say it can," rejoined the one with the green pompon, "and I've done it.'

"For how long?" asked the red hat, skeptically.

"Well, for one whole year."

"Oh, how did you do it? Please tell how you managed!" cried the others.

"And may I hear, too?" begged a timid little stranger, coming across from the other side of the car.

"Well, it is a great deal simpler if you like cold mattresses," began the green pompon.

"Cold mattresses?" repeated the stranger.

"She means excelsior biscuits," explained one of the others

"They're very filling," continued the greed pompen. "And they are only eleven cents a box. Then there is a kind of coffee you can get for eighteen cents a pound. I don't guarantee that it's Mocha and Java, but it's not bad. If you drink two cups a day it lasts a week.

"One pound of sugar at six cents lasts a week, and so does a can of condensed milk, for ten cents. Count fifteen cents a week for bread—you can toast it, of course—and fourteen cents for half a pound of butter, and fifteen cents a week for fruit, and it will average about eleven cents a day for breakfast.

"For lunch you can have a couple of good sandwiches and tea or cocoa for fourteen cents. You can get a good slice of cooked meat at the delicatessen store for five cents.

"That leaves you twenty five cents for dinner, and it has to be a good hot one if you are going to live a year on fifty cents a day. You've got to do without chocolate eclairs and all the sweet things that taste good and you've got to be so firm about it that you will hate yourself. Think up all the things that make bone and muscle. Spinach is fine.

"You will have to invest a little money to start with at the five and ten cent store for dishes, and get a little burner that fastens on the gas jet—only some landladies won't let you do that. If you can't use the gas you will have to get an alcohol lamp, and eat twenty-five cent dinners to even up on the alcohol.

"Room rent, for half a room, of course can be had for a dollar and fifty cents, if you don't mind stairs; and you can't mind them until your salary is raised. Car fare will be at eighty cents a week.

"Your laundry you will have to do in the bathtub, and sometimes the landlady objects to that, too, and won't even let you dry your handkerchiefs on the window-pane.

"That makes five dollars and eighty cents a week, not counting soap and postage stamps."

"Or clothes," said the girl in the red hat.

"And there are thousands of girls in New York who earn only six dollars a week," said another girl.

The timid little stranger got up and took her old place again across the car.

"I get only five dollars a week," she said.

Isolate Disease and Save, Advises Dixon.

"The money saving makes it common scene for the householder immediately to have a case of communicable disease properly isolated," said State Health Commissioner Samuel G Dixon in discussing ways in which people can protect themselves against disease.

"If a case of scarlet fever, for instance is immediately isolated in a room as remote as possible from other occupied rooms in the house" continued Dr. Dixon the chances of the other members of the household escaping the infection are manifoldly increased. Leaving out the question of the parents' duty to safeguard the lives of their other children and their neighbors' children think of the actual ecomomy there is in the taking of a little simple precaution at the outset.

"In addition to isolating the case, there should be hung over the door of the sick room, and it requires trouble and expense to do it a sheet kept moist with a disinfecting solution. This solution may be prepared by dissolving eight bichloride of mercury tablets in one gallon of hot water. It should be noted that this is poisonous.

"It will be readidly appreciated that by confining the infection to one room, the expense of disinfection of infected articles that, under other circumstances it might seem best to sacrifice, would be naturally decreased. The room chosen for the confinment of the scarlet fever patient will of course, have been stripped of curtains and upholstery and all other furniture not necessary for the comfort of the occupants.

"As a money-saving proposition, therefore, don't lose a momemt in adequately isolating a case of scarlet fever, diptheria or other communicable disease, and keep it isolated."

Dancing Proves Fatal.

Shot Down in Cold Blood.

Philadelphia, Dec. 26th.—Shot down in cold blood by two youthful desperadoes because his pockets failed to contain the wages for which they had held him up, Charles Pregge, a sixteen-year-old, was brutally murdered at the corner of East Venango and Chatham streets Friday night shortly before 7 o'clock. The boy was on his way from a mill in North Kensington in which he works to his home at 2057 East Venango street. He met his death at a spot that is at present unbuilt and is practically surrounded by open lots. Had not the tragedy been witnessed by a little boy of five whose name is withheld by the police, as he was playing near at hand, the police might still be looking aimlessly for a clew to the murder. It was because of the child's story of having seen a boy shot that the police went and found the body and it is on the little fellows description of the murderers that they are now hot on the trail of the two bandits who did the deed.

Young Pregge was walking along the deserted part of the Venango street, where it crosses Chatham, when he was suddenly confronted by two young men who had been sauntering slowly before him, and who turned when he drew near them.

"Hand over your money," said one, as the other covered Pregge with a revolver.

The frightened youth stammered out that he had no money at all.

"None of that," cried the first speaker. This is pay night. Give us your envelope."

Pregge protested that he had no money as he had not, the mill in which he worked paying on Saturday instead of Friday, as is the general custom now. The poor boy begged his captors to search him and see that what he said was true.

No danger of consumption if you use Foley's Honey and Tar to cure that stubborn cough.

—The Sunday School at Coloville gave a very delightful entertainment at the chapel at that place on Christmas eve. There were special music, speaking and recitations. Two young ladies of Bellefonte sang several very pretty solos which helped to make a very pleasant evening.

—The saloon keepers of Sunbury are well pleased with the order of the court in closing their places of business on Christmas day. It was an unusual thing for them to fully enjoy the entire day as a holiday. They state that hereafter they will close on that day whether there is an order from the court or not.

—An editor in Indian Territory was running the motto in his paper: "We tell the truth." He recently received a "call" from a large man who objected to the truth being told, and in consequence the motto disappeared and the following was inserted: "Until we recover from the injuries recently received, this paper will lie just like the rest of them."

—The best citizens of any town are always the ones that are ready to boost. The man who is ever ready and willing to say a good word for the town in which he lives usually accomplishes more for the real good of the community than he is given credit for. The man who is satisfied with the town in which he is living generally leaves a good impression with the person whom he is talking.

—Many a woman goes out shopping dressed in silk and enveloped in perfume whose hard-working husband hasn't had a new suit of clothes or a decent meal in five years. Yes, and many a loafer stands on the street with a stinking pipe in his face, his trunk full of booze and his mouth full of profanity, whose hard-working wife hasn't had a new dress or a kind word since she was married.

—Commenting on the present cost of living, the Easton Press says: If you find that you are $2 short in your monthly account you need not think you have been extravagant during the past four weeks. Every one, according to figures complied by R. G. Dun company, has to pay $2 more to live during the month ending December 31st, than they did the month previous. The cost of commodities is the highest since February, 1844. The marked advance in prices is explained as due to the higher cost of butter, eggs, milk, diary and garden products.

—On Monday December 31st Roger T. Bayard became Associate Editor of the Daily News and Bellefonte Republican. Anything in the way of news that you can throw his way will be cheerfully accepted. Mr. Bayard is not new at the work having been connected with newspaper business in days gone by. It is the intention of the management to make the Daily News and Republican the best local papers in Central Pennsylvania, bar none. We ask the hearty co-operation of the people of Bellefonte and Centre county, so if you are not already on the subscription list of either paper subscribe now and we assure you your patronage will be appreciated.

—We are indeed sorry to note the serious illness of Mrs. Frank Wallace of Milesburg who is suffering from pneumonia.

—Mr. John Hull who has been confined to his home on Bishop street the past six weeks with rheumatism was able to be out on Sunday.

—The old armory and skating rink on Water street is a thing of the past now as they have torn the building down and sold the lumber.

—The entire ceiling in Clayton Brown's cigar store and shooting gallery fell Friday morning, causing quite a little excitement

—Mr. and Mrs. Ed. I. Gillen received a very nice Xmas present Christmas, when a bouncing baby boy made his arrival at their home.

—Mr. and Mrs. Robert McCalmont, of Rochester, N. Y., are rejoicing over the arrival of a bouncing baby boy. Accept our congratulations Roy.

—Mr. W. R. Jenkins had his new automobile out on Monday. It is a new invention and from all appearances it is going to be a great success.

—Little Mamie Musser who has been so ill with scarlet fever the past few weeks is recovering rapidly and will soon be out among her little friends again.

—Mr. John Strunk has accepted the position at the Pennsylvania Freight station made vacant by Harry Smith who is now employed in another department of the work.

—People talk of nursing their wrath as if they are bloodthirsty for revenge, but leave an angry man alone and in two days he will have forgotten what he got angry about.

—They are putting some very pretty cozy corners and settees in the lock up for those who don't feel disposed to keep sober. It will be a big improvement and the drunks need not fear going there.

—A young Somerset County farmer who recently married a Johnstown girl is beginning to seriously doubt whether she will make a good farmer's wife. Lately she refused to allow him to sell a calf because it would hurt the cow's feelings.—Johnstown Tribune.

—American Lime and Stone Company of Tyrone, Bellefonte, etc., presented the Bellefonte Hospital with a present of $100 00 for a Christmas greeting. The gift was graciously received and shall be put to the best advantage toward the construction of the new annex of which we are so much in need of.

—Some individuals are constitutionally thin, but it is an exceptional case that will not respond to proper "get fat" treatment, which consists in moderate exercise, good thing to eat, and plenty of refreshing sleep. Raw egg are fattening Drink plenty of water. Blue pencil the fretting habit. Get out of doors every day and sleep at least eight or nine hours every night.

—Bright gold pieces will nestle in the toes of many little stocking at Christmas time. The United States mint in Philadelphia now is a whirl with activity and the monster presses are taxed to the utmost turning out hundreds of coins each minute to meet the great demand of the Christmas rush. Six millions of dollars in gold, in double eagles, eagles and two-and-a-half pieces will be coined before the New Year. The tiny two and-a-half piece, hardly larger than a cent, is the popular Christmas coin. The demand for the minor coins, dimes, nickles and cents, so necessary to the shopper, is greater than ever before. The coinage of pennies alone will reach a million dollars before the demand of the holiday season is supplied.
